

Target

Art Direction

01 / 05

The Project:

Target is launching a new Mondo Llama product of paint and paintbrushes. They want a physical and a digital banner ad for the new product. A professional photographer will photograph the concept. You will direct them based on your sketches, mood board, and layout concepts to communicate your vision to the photographer. Both ads need to include: Target logo Target Visual Identity Headline and copy Photography of product Item name + price

Process:

I had about 15 minutes to shoot the photos I needed for my ad. My idea for the ad was more complex in post-production than some of my classmates. I prepped for the photo shoot by coming in with a shot list and photo examples of lighting. Before the shoot, I had done a lot of planning and practice assembling the paintbrushes into letters. During the photoshoot, I had examples of the types of photos I wanted and a sketch of the final composition. I followed the photographer's advice and adjusted my shot list during the photo shoot to keep the lighting consistent. I also used museum putty to help keep the paint brushes in place during shooting. I shot more photos than I used to create the ad, but it gave me a couple of options in post-production.

Role In Project:

Art Director, Concepting, Research, Designer

Print ad for magazine spread

Digital banner ad for website

Hamilton Wood Type & Printing

Internship

02 / 05

Company:

The Hamilton Wood Type & Printing Museum is in Two Rivers, WI. They have over 1.5 million pieces of wood type in their collection. Hamilton is a 501(c)3 nonprofit arts and educational organization. They are passionate about teaching people about typography and the history of American printing. Hamilton has a gallery space in the museum and offers tours, workshops, and a store with prints and type to buy.

The Project:

I worked on various projects for Hamilton. Some projects used the brand guide. Summer workshop TV slides and drink tokens for events with the bar (Ink & Drink workshop) used the brand guide. I also created an identity mark for the Old Type, New Ways Exhibition at MIAD.

Role In Project:

Researcher, Sketching, Concepting

Process:

During my internship, I led some projects and collaborated with other staff from the museum. For many of these projects, I did a lot of research and created documents for other team members to help communicate and organize my ideas.

Simply Lemonade

Advertising

03 / 05

The Project:

Simply Lemonade is creating an advertising campaign for the summer. They wanted to kick off the summer with a campaign to remind consumers that they should choose Simply as their go-to drink. Their key messages are that their products are the best because they have simple ingredients with no added preservatives or artificial flavors.

The Process:

In this project, I worked on keeping the campaign cohesive and providing some variety throughout the campaign. The campaign communicates how refreshing and good the drinks are. It also communicates the different choices for consumers. When I started working on the campaign, I used either the non-alcoholic or the alcoholic version. I made the campaign more cohesive by incorporating both versions in each advertisement. I had to think about the campaign across different platforms. For example, on social media, printed to be held, and printed to be seen from far away.

Role in Project:

Concepting, Copywriting, Designer

Digital ad for Instagram

Wonder Fair

Branding

The Project:

Wonder Fair is a stationary and art supply company in downtownLawrence, KS. It is a well-known store in the community.Some things that make the company unique are that they have a cat named Dave and a haunted bathroom. TheWonder Fair logo didn't accurately align with their business.

The Process:

In this project, I learned how to create an identity mark to communicate a brand. I created different variations of the common types of logos. After creating the identity mark, I learned how to apply the mark in practical uses to benefit the brand. For example, using the logo in their website and Instagram picture. I also chose to apply the logo to two types of shopping bags. I also learned how to keep the logo consistent in the usage of these applications. I also took the logo to create a brand system for social media posts.

Role In Project:

Concepting, Designing

Rockabilly Chili

The Project:

WMSE wanted to target a different audience for the campaign this year to promote attendance at the WMSE Rockabilly Chili Fundraiser. This campaign will include a poster, digital banner ads directing users to a campaign-specific landing page, and billboard advertising.

The Process:

The target audience is families. The design will lean feminine and focus on the chili and the ingredients. There are activities for kids during the event, and past advertisements have leaned more masculine.

Role In Project:

Concepting, Copywriting, Designer

